PROFESSIONAL OPINION SHOWS LOCAL WELL LIKELY PROFITABLE

In accord with its usual policy of "finding out first" The Star has now received confirmation from a high source of its contention that the oil well at the edge of town was liable in all likelihood to prove just as productive (or more so) than any other drilling in the district.

This is based upon long and careful study of the formations by Mr. C. Coulter, the geologist, and we are pleased to publish the following signed report from that gentleman, the original of which can be seen on our files:

"A professional opinion of the possibilities of securing oil production in the Interior Oil company's well, now drilling the well on the outskirts of Wainwright, Alberta.

"The undersigned geologist, without receiving any compensation for professional services or for this statement, desires to give an opinion that it is his honest opinion that the well now being drilled near the town of Wainwright will encounter the same sixty-foot saturated oil sand as has been found in the B.P. wells as also those at Fabian.

"This opinion is rendered only after a most careful geologic survey of the whole area.

(Signed) C. C. COULTER

Mr. McLeod asked the reason for the delay in getting the chemicals to work at the last fire and this was explained as far as possible by the Chief and the Chairman.

It was moved by Messrs. McLeod and Michon that this resolution be adopted.

The meeting then adjourned to be called again by the chairman for the purpose of electing captains etc. at a later date.

EDGERTON TEAM FAIL IN DAWSON CUP FIXTURE

For the second time within a week the Edgerton hockey team went down to defeat in an attempt to lift the Dawson Cup from its present holders the Wainwright Oil Magnates.

Only a small crowd was out to see the effort. The first period was almost a repetition of last week's fracas as the locals were playing indifferent hockey however during the last two periods the Wainwright aggregation stepped out and the game was vastly improved.

At the end of the first spasm the score stood 1-0 in favor of Edgerton Sawyer getting the counter that put his team in the lead.

The joy of the visitors was only short lived however, as shortly after the face-off in the second, York snapped up a loose puck at center, tore off a few agonising stunts and planted the rubber behind Burton, to tie up the score. Habikirk who had been moved back on defence, made a fast rush from end to end, encircled the Edgerton guards and landed a beauty in the hem.

The Lubricators then staged a three-man rush; Habikirk, York and Parmenter going down together, Parmenter making a beautiful pass to York who scored.

End of second period, Wainwright 3, Edgerton 1.

"About half way through the third stanza Habikirk rushed. York going down with him. Habikirk carried clear through and shot, the puck hitting Burton on the pads, York and Habikirk both rushed for the rebound and between them poked in another for good measure.

With a 4-1 lead, the local boys began to slow up, and the visitors to step on the gas. Sawyer went down unassisted and scored and a few minutes before time was called. Slim whether repeated.

The game ended 4-3 in favor of Wainwright. The home team was well out of the services of Loring, but Bill Boudreau filled up nicely on the forward line and Habikirk took Loring's place on defence.

Sawyer, Stewart, Wheeler and Burton, of the visitors, were all good individually but the team needs more system to get good results.

$50,000 ALLOTTED FOR IRRIGATION SOUTH OF PROVINCE

EDMONTON.—Hon. Vernon Smith member of railways said that an item of $62,350 in the annual estimates for "colonization and irrigation districts" covered $50,000 for development and colonization with $5,000 for salaries and office expenses.

Mr. Smith said the appropriation was intended to cover any policy that might be adopted by the government for colonizing irrigation lands in the Lethbridge Northern Irrigation district.

Last year the actual expenditure from capital account for this work was $16,397.63.

Copies of the Widstoe report, the salient features of which have already been published have been distributed.

U. B. M. OF W. E. HOLD THEIR FIRST ANNUAL BANQUET

The first annual banquet in connection with the Wainwright lodge of U.B.M. of W.E. was held in the C.N.R. clubroom on Friday evening last, under the presidency of Bro. C. Freed, who was supported at the high table by Bro. J. Flint, Bro. J. Sutherland, and Bro. E. Solstead, of Viking.

A letter of regret was read from Bro. W. Aspinall, asst. gen. chairman of the C.N.R. federation.

In proposing the toast of the brotherhood, the president said that the lodge was in a very fine state and well managed, and that their work during the past year was a wonderful achievement considering the adverse circumstances. Their position reflected credit on the past officials, and continued success was assured so long as affairs were run on the efficient business lines of the present. The lodge had sustained a loss in the retirement of their old secretary, Bro. J. Whittle, although they had to be thankful that Bro. Whittle still held office. It was a pleasing duty to him to make a presentation of a fountain pen to the late secretary as a small token of esteem and regard from the members of the organisation.

In acknowledging the gift Bro. Whittle recalled his associations with the members, and stated that he had always done his duty to the best of his ability and would always continue such.

Many other toasts were submitted and responded to, and a feature was the strong competition for the P.O.B.S. gold medal, which after a hard fight went to Bro. C. Tester, with Bro. B. Hodgkins a close second.

During the evening songs were rendered by Messrs W. and G. Arkwright, Flint, Tansley and Lily, and instrumental music was supplied by the brotherhood orchestra under the direction of Bro. Blair of Ribstone.

Before dispersing, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. F. Morris, the present secretary, for the successful manner in which he had carried out the arrangements for the function.

VERY ENJOYABLE SKATING CARNIVAL HELD IN RINK

On Friday evening last Ray Geer's palace was the scene of a splendid carnival. A good sized crowd was out to skate and otherwise enjoy themselves.

The main feature of the attraction was the fancy skating of Madam Bourque, of Edmonton, assisted by Mrs. Miles also of the city. It is a long time since Wainwright has witnessed an entertainment of this nature, and the large audience, went home apparently well pleased with the performance.

The exhibition of fancy skating put on by Madam Bourque and her partner was well worth the price of admission, it was delightful to watch the graceful gliding and balancing of these ladies, and their dancing on skates was greatly appreciated.

Manager Geer ran off a variety of races during the evening; and at intervals, between the different events, the public were allowed to use the ice.

Although it was a delightful evening's entertainment and a great deal of credit is due Mr. Geer, for his enterprise in bringing Madam Bourque and Mrs. Miles to Wainwright.

Both ladies expressed themselves as being highly pleased with Wainwright and their reception here and hoped for a return engagement next year.

List of the winners in the events:—Boys race 10-12 years—Jackie Davidson.

Boys race 12-16 years—Gordon Kenney.

Girls musical chairs—Margaret Steel.

Mens musical chairs—Fred Parmenter.

Ladies musical chairs—Miss Polly Spradling.

Free for all skating race—Gordon Kenney.

Special race—Ross York.

Band Master Frank Stott and his musicians supplied splendid music during the evening.

CABINET COUNCIL DECIDES TO INCREASE TELEPHONE RENTALS

EDMONTON.—An increase of telephone rates of 50 cents a month on residence telephones in the city and rural districts, and $1 to $1.50 a month on business telephones, has been decided upon by the provincial cabinet council, but still has to obtain approval of the Farmer government caucus.

A big fight is expected in the caucus on the subject as some of the rural members have already been receiving protests from their constituents against the proposed increases.

The estimated revenue from the government telephones for 1925 is $2,523,000, and estimated expenses $2,663,176 leaving an estimated telephone deficit of $140,176 to be added to the general estimated deficit on income account of $368,632.51. This telephone deficit is without laying aside any depreciation whatsoever. The increased rates proposed would provide depreciation fund of between $350,000 and $400,000 a year.

CROP ESTIMATES WERE BELOW ACTUAL RETURNS

WINNIPEG.—As finally published in printed form the January crop estimates of the Dominion bureau of statistics show some changes in oats, barley and rye from the figures issued in Bulletin form in January. All the changes made are in Alberta yields.

Oats are decreased some 5,700,000 bushels, making the Alberta yield 55,251,000; barley is increased some 2,000,000 bushels to 12,347,000, while rye is decreased by 460,000 bushels to 2,744,000.

A revision of the wheat figures for the prairie provinces is necessary, but this may not be made by the bureau until the end of the season.

Allowing 45,000,000 bushels to be retained for seed feed and country mills, there would remain for the market, on the bureau's estimate only 190,300,000, and deliveries have been continuing around 2,000,000 per week.

It is probable that a portion of the deliveries have been reported at gross weights instead of net weights and therefore the delivery figures may be slightly too high, making all reasonable allowances it is now certain that the wheat crop on the prairie was under-estimated by the bureau.

Mr. P. Dewar, who has been in an Edmonton hospital for several weeks following a serious operation, returned home Monday night, and although still very weak and poorly is getting along as nicely as can be expected.

MAPLE LEAF COMPANY GOING AFTER OIL STRONGER THAN EVER

The following is the gist of a private letter from Mr. Roy Williams, the managing director of the Maple Leaf Oil Co., which has been received by the editor of The Star, and which tends to show that the company are still fully alive to the possibilities of this oilfield and are determined to keep the public as fully informed as is consistently possible with all their movements along the lines of development.

Incidentally, it shows that the efforts of the press on behalf of the field in general are fully appreciated, and thus gives honor to the prophet even in his own country!

The letter follows:—

"No doubt you will be interested to know just exactly what our company intends to do this year. I might say in this connection that we have purchased a combination outfit which will arrive at Fabian on or before the first of the month. We have also been successful in obtaining the services of a first-class driller of the name of H. D. Steel of Texas, who comes highly recommended by Mr. Dave Credille who is well known to you and everybody in the oil business as a reliable driller.

"The first work to be commenced early this spring will be the test of Maple Leaf No. 1 oil sands, and we are all satisfied after the test is made she will prove a wonderful well at though at the present time she is certainly a big asset to our company as a gas well. But we intend to get the oil and get it as soon as possible. After this is completed, we will immediately spend in our No. 2 well which is already an oil well. No. 3 will be drilled this year as we intend to get after oil more strenuously than ever.

"I notice the 'Wainwright Star' and the 'Edmonton Journal' are doing a lot of good work in boosting the Wainwright field, and I feel satisfied if you would all work together in this connection, great things could be accomplished; just the same as the press is doing in British Columbia today with regard to the mining development, and they are meeting with huge success."

LOCAL NOTES

We understand that Mrs. L. Howes is intending to leave some time this week for a trip to Niagara. She will be taking the Byron children back to their father there.

Miss L. Prosser entertained a number of her young friends on Friday last on the occasion of her thirteenth birthday.

***Dry stove wood and the very best coals are always to be found at the Imperial yard, Phone 1-0 and get satisfaction with every load.

We learn that little Virginia Bission who has been paying a long visit to her grandmother in Quebec, is to return home with Mrs. Hugh Kemp who has been visiting in the east.

The ladies of St. Andrew's church held a successful sale of cooking in the restaurant on Saturday last, and we understand the financial results were worth while.

***Try a load of our Newcastle stove coal at $7.00 at the shed. It has no equal as a cooking coal; once you try it you will always want it. Phone 57 the Atlas yard, for a load.

The sale of the Worthington stock and effects held last week proved to be a real good sale, as prices ruled fairly high all round. We understand that Mrs. Worthington will still continue to run the farm.

It would seem that feed is becoming scarce owing to heavy snowfall this winter, and that many horses are starting to death. Quite a lot of the old 1920 straw stacks have been cleaned right up, too!

***For coal to give satisfaction, Penn lump or stove; Black Gem; or Humbertone are the escape, and abandon the role of a daring escape, and abandon the role of a daring escape, and abandon the role of a daring escape.

Mr. John Bission was taken to a hospital at Edmonton for medical treatment last week.

When Mr. M. Goulet returned home from his eastern trip last week he was accompanied by his little niece who will make an extended visit here and attend school.

The regular meeting of the W.I. held on Saturday at the home of Mr. C. Turner saw quite a large gathering and some interesting papers were given by members. These will appear in our next issue.

***You see good judgement when you order a big load of dry wood from the Atlas yard for $6.00 delivered. Phone 57.

Mr. C. Church was the highest bidder for the cattle sold on Saturday last in the town pound.

We learn that an old friend in the person of Mr. Fred. Beresford will soon be returning to Wainwright where we believe he is to have charge of the completion of the drilling of the well on the edge of town, which is now in the hands of the Interior Oil Co.

REVOLUTION IS MADE BIG FEATURE METRO FAMOUS PLAY

In "Scaramouche" the big Metro feature which comes to the theatre for Friday and Saturday next the French revolution is made the groundwork of one of the finest film plays ever attempted.

The story runs as follows:—Returning to Gavrilie and the home of his grandfather, Mr. Beresford, is Andre-Louis Moreau (Ramon Novarro), with his friend Philippe, Phillips is killed in a one-sided duel by the Marquis de la Tour d'Azyr (Lewis Stone), who fears the youth's revolutionary sentiment. Andre-Louis swears vengeance. Andre-Louis parts from his godfather and his boyhood sweetheart, Aline de Keradon (Alice Terry), now courted by the Marquis, and goes to Rennes. In the public square he inflames the populace and denounces la Tour d'Azyr, until he is forced to flee for his life. The dragons pursue him to Gavrilie, but Aline helps him elude them, and he joins a band of strolling players, as Scaramouche, the clown.

Partly because of bitterness at Aline Andre becomes engaged to Clementine the leading lady. In time he brings them to the Theatre Feydau in Paris. The Marquis, meanwhile, has been attracted to the beauty of Clementine. Andre, dazzled by the noblemen's attentions, believing his empty promises gives herself to la Tour.

That night the Marquis attends the performance at the Theatre Feydau with Aline. The play progresses smoothly until suddenly Scaramouche tears the clown's mask from his face, and in mad fury denounces the hated aristocracy and la Tour d'Azyr. The audience, swayed by his eloquence, rush to the box of the Marquis, shouting "Death to the butcher of Rennes!" The Marquis is saved by the arrival of the gendarmes. Andre-Louis makes a daring escape, and abandons the role of a daring escape, and abandons the role of a daring escape.

He becomes a fencing master, and the tale finds no trace of him. Meanwhile the aristocrats in the National Assembly have evolved a new way of disposing of the people's representatives by killing them under the lawful guise of duelling. The patriot Danton prevails upon Andre-Louis to become substitute deputy for one slain by aristocrats, so the fencing master becomes the people's idol in the National Assembly, and with his sword even up the score against nobility.

At last he crosses blades with la Tour d'Azyr. Aline and the Countess de Plongastat arrive at the duelling grounds as the wounded Marquis emerges. Believing Andre killed, Aline swears the Marquis' arms. Andre misunderstands this.

Gory revolution at last breaks out in Paris. Aline and the Countess find Andre is still alive and the son of la Tour d'Azyr gives the Marquis his sword to escape as best he can, while she the Countess and Aline go armed with passports to the Paris garret, where Morau's eloquence saves them from a touch.

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood
A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the Wolf Dog
is an Adaptation of This Story

CHAPTER I

To Baree, for many days after he was born, the world was a vast gloomy cavern.

During these first days of his life his home was in the heart of a great windfall where Gray Wolf, his blind mother, had found a safe nest for his babyhood, and to which Kazan, her mate, came only now and then, his eyes gleaming like strange balls of greenish fire in the darkness.

Baree, of course, would never know their story. He would never know that Gray Wolf, his mother, was a full-blooded wolf, and that Kazan, his father, was a dog. In his nature was already beginning its wonderful work, but it would never go beyond certain limitations. It would tell him, in time, that his beautiful wolf-mother was blind, but he would never know of that terrible battle between Gray Wolf and the lynx in which his mother's sight had been destroyed. Nature could tell him nothing of Kazan's merciless vengeance, of the wonderful years, of their matchless, of their loyalty, their strange adventures in the great Canadian wilderness—it could make him only a son of Kazan.

And then came that wonderful day when the greenish balls of fire that were Kazan's eyes came nearer and nearer, a little at a time, and very cautiously. Herebefore Gray Wolf had warned him back. To be alone was the first law of her wild breed, during mothering-time. A low snarl from her throat and Kazan had always stopped. But on this day the snarl did not come. In Gray Wolf's throat it died away in a low, whimpering sound. A note of loneliness, of gladness, of a great yearning. "It is all right now," she was saying to Kazan and Kazan, pausing for a moment to make sure—replied with an answering note deep in his throat.

Still slowly, as if not quite sure of he began to move. An inch at a time he dragged himself away from Gray Wolf's side. Every muscle in her little body tensed. Again her wolf blood was warning her. There was danger for Baree. Her lips drew back, baring her fangs. Her throat trembled, but the note in it never came. Out of the darkness two yards away came a soft, purr-like whine, and the caressing sound of Kazan's tongue.

Baree had felt the thrill of his great adventure. He had discovered his father.

This all happened in the third week of Baree's life. He was just eighteen days old when Gray Wolf allowed Kazan to make the acquaintance of his son. It had not been for Gray Wolf's blindness and the memory of that day on the Sun Rock when the lynx had destroyed her eyes, she would have given birth to Baree in the open, and his legs would have been quite strong. He would have known the sun and the moon and the stars; he would have realized what the thunder meant, and would have seen the lightning flashing the sky. But as it was, there had been nothing for him to do in that black cavern under the windfall but stumble about a little in the darkness, and lick with his tiny red tongue the raw bones that were strewn about them. The sun was straight above the forest when, an hour or two after Kazan's visit, Gray Wolf slipped away. Between Baree's nest and the top of the windfall were forty feet of jammed and broken timber through which not a ray of light could break. This blackness did not frighten him, for he had yet to learn the meaning of light. Day and not night, was to fill him with his first great terror. So quite fearlessly with a yelp for his mother to wait for him, he began to follow. If Gray Wolf heard him, she paid not attention to his call, and the escape of her claws on the dead timber died swiftly away.

"He would have slunk back into the friendly gloom of the windfall, but at this moment Gray Wolf came around the end of a great log, followed by Kazan."

what he would find, Kazan as he dropped down heavily on his belly close to Gray Wolf. He was unafraid and mightily curious. And Kazan, too, was curious. He sniffed. In the gloom his ears were alert. After a little Baree

This time Baree did not stop at the eight-inch log which had always shut him in his world in that particular direction. He clambered to the top of it and rolled over on the other side. Beyond this was vast adventure, and he plunged into it courageously.

It took him a long time to make the first twenty yards. Then he came to a log worn smooth by the feet of Gray Wolf and Kazan, and stopping every few feet to send out a whimpering call for his mother, he made his way farther and farther along it. As he went there grew slowly a curious change in this world of his. He had known nothing but blackness. And now this blackness seemed breaking it self up into strange shapes and shadows. Once he caught the flash of a fiery streak above him—a gleam of sunshine—and it startled him so that he flattened himself down upon the log and did not move for a half a minute. Then he went on. An ermine squeaked under him. He heard the swift rustling of a quire's feet, and a curious what-what-what that was not at all like any sound his mother had ever made. He was off the trail.

A new terror held Baree rooted there. In an instant the whole world had changed. It was a flood of sunlight. Everywhere he looked he could see strange things. But it was the sun that frightened him most. It was his first impression of fire, and it made his eyes smart. He would have slunk back into the friendly gloom of the windfall, but at this moment Gray Wolf came around the end of a great log, followed by Kazan. Se muzzle Baree joyously, and Kazan in a mass doglike fashion wagged his tail. This mark of the dog was to be a part of Baree. Half wolf he would always be. He tried to wag it now. Perhaps Kazan saw the effort, for he emitted a muffled yelp of approbation as he sat back on his haunches.

For Baree it had been a great day. He had discovered his father—and the world.

CHAPTER II

And it was a wonderful world—a world of vast silence, empty of everything but the creatures of the wild. The nearest Hudson's Bay post was a hundred miles away, and the first town of civilization was a straight three hundred to the south. Two years before, Tusoo, the Cree trapper, had called this his domain. It had come down to him, as was the law of the forefathers; but Tusoo had been the last of his worn-out family; he had died of smallpox, and his wife and his children had died with him. Since then no human foot had taken up his trail. The lynx had multiplied. The moose and caribou had gone unharmed by man. The beaver had built their homes undisturbed. The tracks of the black bear were as thick as the tracks of the deer farther south. And where once the deadfalls and poison-balls of Tusoo had kept the wolves thinned down there was no longer a menace for these molasses of the wilderness.

Following the sun of this first wonderful day came the moon and the stars and the stars of Baree's first real night.

Half a dozen times, as Baree wandered about near the windfall, he heard a soft whirr over his head, and once or twice he saw gray shadows floating swiftly through the air. They were the big northern owls swooping down to investigate him, and if he had been a rabbit instead of a wolf-dog whelp, his first night under the moon and stars would have been his last; for unlike Wapoose, the rabbit, he was not cautious. Gray Wolf did not watch him closely. Instinct told her that in these forests there was no great danger for Baree except at the hands of man. In his veins ran the blood of the wolf. He was a hunter of all other wild creatures, but no other creature, either winged or fanged, hunted him.

In a way Baree sensed this. He was not afraid of the owls. He was not afraid of the strange bloodcurdling cries they made in the black spruce-tops. But once fear entered into him and he hurried back to his mother. It was when one of the winged hunters of the air swooped down on a snowshoe rabbit, and the squealing angrier of the doomed creature set his heart thumping like a little hammer. He felt in those cries the nearness of that one ever-present tragedy of the wild death.

This rabbit was the climax in the first chapter of Baree's education. It was as if Gray Wolf and Kazan had planned it all out, so that he might receive his first instruction in the art of killing.

The fact that Oohoomisew, the big snow-owl, had made her nest in a broken stub not far from the windfall was destined to change the whole course of Baree's life, just as the blind ing of Gray Wolf had changed hers and a man's club had changed Kazan's. The creek ran close past the stub which had been shrouded by lightning; and this stub stood in a still, dark place in the forest, surrounded by tall black spruce and enveloped in gloom even in broad day. Many times Baree had gone to the edge of this mysterious bit of forest and had peered in curiously, and with a growing desire.

He was fully three hundred yards from the windfall when he passed Oohoomisew's stub and into a thick growth of young balsams. And there—directly in his path—crouched the monster.

With a space of two feet between them, the pup and the owl eyed each other. In that moment, if Gray Wolf could have seen, she might have said to Baree, "Use your legs—and run!" and Oohoomisew, the old owl, might have said to Papayuchisew: "You little fool—use your wings and fly!"

They did neither—and the fight began.

Papayuchisew started it, and with a single wild yelp Baree went back in a leap, the owl's beak fastened like a red hot wire in the soft flesh at the end of his nose. That one yelp of surprise and pain was Baree's first and last cry in the fight. The wolf surged in him; rage and desire to kill possessed him. As Papayuchisew hung on, he made a curious hissing sound; and as Baree rolled and gnashed his teeth and fought to free himself from that amazing grip on his nose, fierce little snarls rose out of his throat.

For fully a minute Baree had no use of his jaws. Then, by accident, he wedged Papayuchisew in a crotch of a low ground-shrub, and a bit of his nose gave away. He might have run then, but instead of that he was back at the owl like a flash. Flop went Papayuchisew on his back, and Baree buried his needle-like teeth in the bird's breast. It was like trying to bite through a pillow; the feathers were as close and thick. Deeper and deeper Baree sank his fangs, and just as they were beginning to prick the owl's skin, Papayuchisew—jabbing a little blindly with a beak that snapped sharply by every time it closed—got him by the ear.

The pain of that hold was excruciating to Baree, and he made a more desperate effort to get this teeth through his enemy's thick armour of feathers. In the struggle they rolled under the low balsams to the edge of the ravine through which ran the creek. Over the steep edge they plunged, and as they

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA MARCH 18th, 1925.

A SATISFIED
CITIZENRYIt was indeed a treat to once again
witness the crowded meeting in the Council Chamber last Thursday evening,
to hear the annual reports of the Town's fire department and brigade.
Truly there were TEN faithful citizens, including the chairman, who availed themselves of the opportunity to inquire into the working of this most necessary adjunct to the town's forces
and to listen to the different reports
of their work during the past year.
It is sadly to be regretted that not even one of the actual fire brigade were on hand, and yet the point of the discussion entered into by the body few were well taken and received that it would truly seem that while all goes well and smoothly there is no real complaint. Either our citizens are sophistic or disinterested, but it might be well to remember that at such a meeting as this—called for this special purpose—is the place to air any kicks (real or imaginary) and NOT on the street corners where the "soap-box" orators usually hold forth.LET THE PUBLIC KNOWThe directors of at least three Canadian companies are at the moment to the knowledge of the Financial Post under suspicion of withholding information about the progress being made by their companies, in order to buy in the shares at a price less than the real market value on the basis of the business and prospects. Such suspicions are encouraged by the reluctance of the officers and directors to give out information and figures. In one instance the "insiders" admit that they are in market to buy up the stock
where shareholders are ready to sacrifice.There was a time when the "public damned" policy was something more real than a phrase employed by the anti-capitalist press to encourage dissatisfaction with big business and it was considered good business to let shareholders and public know as little as possible about the affairs of the big public service and industrial corporations. But that day has passed. The bigger the corporation usually the more open it now is with the public.
United States Steel in the United States and the Canadian Pacific in Canada, with their weekly and monthly statements of earnings, may be mentioned as leaders in the exemplification of this policy.The policy of taking the public into the confidence of and into partnership with organized business and industry is sound. The heads of the successful corporations realize that it is the way to establish a market for both their products or services and their securities. The company refusing to publish freely important information regarding its affairs is not only away behind the times but is following acourse which will undermine the confidence of its customers and close the door against new capital when it is desired.REMOVE DANGER
FROM FIRE HAZARDSThe movement to reduce fire loss in the large cities is gaining momentum.
The National Fire Protection Association of the United States and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States recently worked out a new plan and have men in the field now perfecting the organization. It involved organization of every municipality with the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce, Association of Credit Men
Safety Council, Institute of Architects and other local organizations, whose national associations have pledged cooperation, a fire prevention committee which shall make survey of fire hazard conditions and apply the now well known methods of improving them.
Franklin H. Wentworth, Boston, secretary National Fire Protection Association outlines the proper methods
and ideals for proper fire prevention
He says:"The municipal organization of should, if it is to function effectively
make the fire commissioner or fire
chief the central factor or instrument of service. In the co-operation and enthusiasm of this officer, who is paid by the people to do this very thing, who is not aroused, the committee's action will be sporadic and its influence short lived. Where the fire commissioner or fire chief has the imagination given the power that will be given him
by a non-political committee or cabinet composed of men and women picked from the most influential organizations of the city, the accomplishment of local fire safety may be only a matter of time. The fire department, if it will then have about him a group which can promptly create outside of politics a public sentiment in support of his projects for the elimination of fire hazards."The day of the fire department whose sole function is water-throwing is already past. Modern fire department although adequately prepared for fire extinguishment, must also be capable of inspection agencies. Their officers must be informed on the subjects of fire barriers and retardants, the chemistry of fire, the action of draughts,
the effect of humidity and many other partly technical and engineering topics,
a knowledge of which is essential to their intelligent and effective service."Many fire departments in the past even where no fire ended ineffective by political influences, have been inadequate largely because the public has not demanded an intelligent service of them. The people being now more completely alive to the economic significance of the fire waste the fire departments are receiving more critical attention, and a higher grade of intelligence and efficiency on the part of

"There is no longer any reasonable excuse short of an earthquake for the occurrence of large or sweeping fires.
their contributing causes are too well known. It is the responsibility of the modern fire chief to know where the dark spots are in the high value or congested portion of his city and get them eliminated. If automatic sprinklers, or fire walls, or doors, or windows are needed to prevent a sweeping fire getting under way he should know where they are required and see that they are installed. A large fire is proof either of incompetency in inspection service or
of timidity in securing fire protection.
Timidity springs from the fact that the fire chief's job is at bottom political and a big and influential property owner can bully him into inaction. In every city there are buildings which are a menace to the community in adequate fire protection. Buildings of this sort endanger the city day and night and impose a higher insurance rate upon the property of all their neighbors."It is a long, discouraging and often fruitless quest for city officials to attempt to apply legal measures to the correction of fire defects in these old buildings. Yet if the conflagration hazards of our cities are to be eliminated
the menace of these fire traps must be removed. In solving this problem the new plan of an influential local fire prevention committee is calculated to serve. Surrounded by a group of leading citizens the fire chief will be more courageous. He will not have to make the fight alone. He can place the fire hazard map before the committee and indicate the black spot through which half the city may be swept by the right kind of a fire on the right kind of a night. The committee itself can then tactfully approach the owner of the black spot and point out to him his civic obligation, and if he cannot see it at first can create sufficient public opinion to clarify his vision.—Financial

to this attitude that the motorist

YOUR OWN PAPER

The class in journalism at Toronto University has been hearing about the country newspaper from Lorne Eddy, editor of the Walkerton Telescope, and president of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, who is well equipped to deal with this subject. While more and more people are getting their national and world news through the big city papers they still get their local news and the views upon which they form their judgment on political and other matters through the home paper.

The local newspaper is edited to render a service to its own constituency just as a business or trade newspaper is edited to serve a particular class in the whole community.

ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Clearly demonstrating the existence of a North Atlantic Shipping combine whose operations are resulting in serious freight rate and passenger rate discrimination against Canadian trade and Canadian ports as compared with almost every other nation Hon. Thomas A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce, on Tuesday last, introduced in the House of Commons the much-heralded plan to control and reduce ocean freight rates by paying a cash consideration to an English shipping firm headed by Sir William Peterson. Mr. Low's speech in explanation of that scheme and the lively debate which followed were the feature of an otherwise dull week in Parliament.

Proper emphasis was laid by the minister on the fact that the plan had its foundation in the report of the Special Committee on Agriculture. Conditions which two sessions ago under the Chairmanship of Andrew R. McNaster (Brome, Quebec), made a unanimous report to Parliament showing that a combine existed and that it was doing grave injury to Canadian trade. He also stressed the fact that while it secured abundant evidence on this combine, from the Canadian end of the report recently tabled in the House of Commons, and from the hand of W. T. R. Preston was largely supplementary to the Committee's report by adding to its evidence that gathered by Mr. Preston in Great Britain and Europe.

Conservative opposition to the Government's plan, as expressed by Hon. H. H. Stevens, (Centre Vancouver) and previously by Donald Sutherland was not so much aimed at the issue of the existence of a combine as at the authorship of the Preston report. Mr. Low pointed out that denunciation of Mr. Preston was not effective criticism of the plan. The Government was not concerned with the report's authorship but rather with the report's contents which showed conclusively that exorbitant freight rates were being charged against Canadian shippers as compared with South African and other shippers within the British Empire.

pire, and the urgency of taking some vigorous steps to remedy an intolerable situation.

Mr. Low also told the House that the Conservatives themselves when in power, took action to ascertain the facts with regard to the control of ocean freight rates and both Sir Henry Drayton and Sir George Foster, who headed commissions of enquiry reported to Parliament the extent to which the North Atlantic Commerce militated against Canadian interests. Having shown the seriousness of the evil Mr. Low left the details of the plan to remedy that evil for later consideration by other speakers and asked or proposed that a special committee of the House be named to deal with this whole question. This coming week may see the conclusion of the preliminary discussion on this subject and has reference to the committee.

SHORT COURSE FOR BEE-KEEPERS

A short course for bee-keepers in the province has been arranged by the Department of agriculture to be held at the school of agriculture at Olds March 10 and 11. Those interested in keeping of bees are invited to attend this course, which is the first of its kind to be held. Bee-keeping is growing as an industry in the province.

COURSE ON BACON HOGS
Plans have been made for the holding of a special two-day course on bacon hogs at the Dominion experimental farm at Lacombe, March 26 and 27. This course is being held under the joint auspices of the Dominion livestock branch, the Dominion experimental farm at Lacombe, the provincial department of agriculture and the faculty of agriculture at the university.

The course on bacon hogs will be free and all farmers interested in the raising of the bacon type of hog are urged to attend. The program will be announced later. There will be, at this special course demonstrations of live bacon hogs both in breeding and commercial classes. These will be judged on foot and placed, the first day, and immediately afterwards will be slaughtered and brought in on the second day for demonstrations in dressed carcasses. For

For this purpose the federal livestock branch will supply an export packing house man. There will be discussions on the rearing, feeding and finishing of the bacon hog, and a discussion also on the general bacon hog situation in the province.

It is believed that this special course will draw many bacon hog breeders and those desiring to enter this branch of hog raising.

CONSERVING FERTILITY ON PRAIRIE FARMS

During the first few years of cultivation and cropping, Western prairie soils lose fertility at a rapid rate. This is more particularly true when summer fallowing is practiced. Investigations by Dr. F. T. Shutt, the Dominion Chemist carried on over a series of years, have proved, however, that as time goes on the loss of fertility occurs at a less rapid rate. The lessons learned from this investigation point conclusively to the necessity of introducing rotation grasses and clovers in to the farming practice if profitable farming is to be maintained. At the conclusion of his bulletin covering his investigations on this subject, the Dominion Chemist points hopefully to the increasing adoption of mixed farming, including dairying and stock raising. The extension of this practice, Dr. Shutt points out, necessarily involves a scheme of soil management which serves to maintain fertility and tends towards increasing rather than decreasing the grain output of the prairies. This bulletin, which covers investigations particularly at Brandon, Manitoba, Scott, Saskatchewan, and Lethbridge, Alberta is Number 44 of the New Series of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, and is available at the Publications Branch.

CANADA'S NEW LINK WITH ALASKA

It is not many years since Alaska was one of those countries whose geographical location was indicated with a grandiloquent sweep of the arm northwards. It has always been a land of mystery, romance and adventure. It has provided the theme for the thrilling tales of novelists and the stirring poems of northern bards. But even though the days of the chechako and the sourdough is done, the brief but active span of the dangerous Dan Magreus and the Lady Lou's, matters of historical reference, the lure of Alaska has not waned, but is as appealing as ever to the hearts of men and women wherein a bit of romance lurks, and that means to everyone.

Alaska is no longer a far off country. It is a very near neighbor to Canada. It will be even nearer this summer. Mr. J. E. Dalrymple, Traffic Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways, has announced that commencing on June 22nd, the company will inaugurate the best-appointed vessel on the Pacific Coast, will be engaged in this new service.

Going northward the ships will reach Prince Rupert at 10.30 on Wednesday morning, following the Monday of sailing from Vancouver, and tourists will be given an opportunity to see something of this great north-western port, as the steamer

Some of the scenes along this magnificent sea voyage are shown in the photographs:

(1) A view of Skagway, Alaska, where visitors will be given ample time to see this famous town and also to visit White Horse and the Atlin Lake district.

(2) A beautiful sunset scene on the Lynn Canal, where the steamships Prince Rupert and Prince George will thread on their journey into the Land of the Midnight Sun.

(3) The Taku Glacier, one mile wide and ninety miles long—one of the largest and most beautiful glaciers in the world.

(4) The Prince Rupert, which, with the Prince George, will be used in the Vancouver-Prince Rupert-Alaska service this summer. These boats are submersible and are among the finest appointed vessels in the Pacific Coast service.

does not continue on its northern trip until four o'clock that afternoon. After passing Old and New Metlakila and Port Simpson, an old Hudson's Bay Post, calls will be made at Ketikikan, a typical Alaskan town built at the foot of the mountains. Proceeding from that point the steamships will touch at Wrangell, beautifully situated near the mouth of the Stikine River and possessing many associations with the period when Alaska was a Russian possession. The next point touched will be Juneau, the capital of Alaska, and a modern city with good motor roads and many points of interest, including the Mendenhall Glacier and mines which have made this country famous. On the way from Wrangell to Juneau there will be an opportunity to see the grandeur of Taku Inlet and the famous Taku Glacier, over a mile wide and 90 miles long.

The ships will arrive at Skagway at seven o'clock Friday morning and will remain there until seven o'clock Saturday night, thus giving ample opportunity to passengers to see this famous town and to visit White Horse and the Atlin Lake District. On the south-bound journey the steamers will reach Vancouver at nine o'clock Wednesday morning, making a complete ten-day round trip.

In addition to the Alaskan trip, the tri-weekly service between Vancouver and Prince Rupert will be maintained and also a semi-weekly service to Anxox and Stewart on the Portland Canal, which service has been in effect for some time past. The establishment by the Canadian National Railways of this Alaska steam-boat service will meet the demands of many tourists, and will be a fitting climax to the famous Triangle Tour, comprising Jasper National Park, the Rockies, the Coast Range and the water voyage through the "Norway of America."

His lungs closed on one of the when he rose to the surface and des- ower's tender feet. Papayuchisew have a sudden squeak. The ear was free at last—and with a snarl of tri- umph Barée gave a vicious tug at Pa- payuchisew's leg.

In the excitement of battle he had not heard the rushing tumult of the creek from almost under his nose and landed close under them, and over the edge of, with a tremendous splash in the centre wondering in his slow-thinking big head why he was moving so swiftly rolled and bumped the bottom, Barée and so pleasantly without any effort loosed his hold. Papayuchisew hung of his own volition, on, and when they reached the bottom he still had his grip on Barée's ear.

To Barée it was a different matter. For twenty feet he was under water, his legs were cramped; every bone in his body seemed out of joint; his ear was stiff where the blood had oozed out of it and hardened, and when he tried to wrinkle his wounded nose, he gave a sharp little yelp of pain. If such things were possible, he looked even worse than he felt. His hair had dried in muddy patches; he was dirt-stained from end to end; and where yesterday he had been plump and shiny, he was now as thin and wretched as misfor- tune could possibly make him. And he was hungry. He had never before known what it meant to be really hun- gry.

PROGRESS OF VOTING ON CHURCH UNION (Special Despatch)

Toronto.—The following statement has been issued to the press by the Bureau of Information of the Joint Committee on Church Union: "In persisting to disapprove the great number of rural congregations which have decided to enter the United Church of Canada, the Presbyterian Church Association would give the public the impression that only those congregations which have voted non-concurrence are worthy of special notice. Every single one of these rural congregations is an integral part of the

REMOVAL OF SETTLERS

The removal of settlers from the drought area in the south-eastern part of the province, initiated last fall by special arrangement between the provincial government, the railways and the federal land settlement board is still proceeding. About 600 families of the settlers removed were located west and north of Lethbridge along the Crow's Nest, Macleod and Altitude lines, while many others went farther north in the province.

Keynote of Northland is Mystery

Mystery is said, is the keynote of the north. Mystery and silence. And because of its mystery there has always been an attraction, something to draw men on and hold them. For it is no mere legend that the north ever calls back those who have once lived in the snow and the mountains, or through an Alaskan summer. What is true of Alaska is also, to a very great extent, true of the east and western shores of Vancouver Island and of the northern mainland shoreline. Scarcely has one left Vancouver or Victoria than there dawns the feeling that here is a new life or industry, and the first thing that one studies native life or industry, and the first thing that one runs into is the mysterious totem pole, that Indian "family tree", which has great significance in the aboriginal history and life of the Indians of the Coast, but which conceals its strange tales from the uninitiated white man.

Two striking examples of Indian art, totem poles which are said to be among the best on the Pacific Coast because of their excellent design, legendary and historical importance, have been brought from the west coast of Vancouver Island to Vancouver, B.C., where Mr. C. Bannister, who secures them from the Indians, has erected them in front of his home. They were made by the Hesketh Indians and illustrate native legends and tribal history.

of it. It was Nekik, the Otter. The Otter had not heard Barée, and in another moment Napanekik, his wife, came sailing out of a path of gloom, and behind her came three little otters, leaving behind them four shimmering wakes in the oily-looking water. What happened after that made Barée forget for a few minutes that he was lost. Nekik had disappeared under trumpet. The instrument is about the size and shape as a cornet. The tones of the harmonica, which is placed inside the horn, are amplified by the trumpet part which is slid back and forth so the breath is expelled or drawn in, according to directions carried on a visible indicator chart in front of the player.

Voice Amplified Fifty Billion Times through Radio

Power of the human voice in loud speech or song is estimated at only one hundred-millionth of a watt. A radio-broadcasting station using 500 watts, "steals" this sound up to the equivalent of almost a full "horsepower voice," which means that the original tone has been amplified about fifty billion times. Measured in this way, the vibrations that leave the station's wires, are far more powerful than the noise that would be caused if all the people in the world gathered into one mighty shout.

Approximately 15,000,000 bananas are consumed every day in the United States.

Water Found in Crystal Ten Million Years Old

Clear and sparkling as though they might have just bubbled from a spring, drops of water more than 10,000,000 years old have been found by O. C. Farrington, head of the geology department of the Field Museum of natural history. They were imprisoned in crystal quartz picked up from rock formations in Brazil. The estimate of the age is based on the character of the rock which belongs to a period that, some scientists declare, flourished over 500,000,000 years ago.

Saving the Clippers

With either power or hand-operated hair clippers the barber must continually shake or rap them against the chair, in order to remove the hair from their teeth. While this may not involve much risk of damage to the clipper, it is annoying to customers. To avoid this, one barber attached a solid rubber ball by means of a counter-screw to either side of the chair at the top, and found that, by tapping the clipper lightly against the ball, all the hair-ends were thrown out.

Cleaning Rusty Tools

Take the lid of an ordinary round baking-powder can and partly fill it with a thick mixture of fine emery dust and light machine oil. Touch the emery mixture with an ordinary cork, kept handy for the purpose, and rub it over the surface of any slightly rusted tool or other article of steel. This will instantly remove the rust and leave a thin protecting film of oil.

The silvertip deposit on the inside of vacuum tubes occurs in the manufacturing process, when metallic magnesium is flashed inside the tube toward the end of the evacuating process. This is supposed to take up the last remaining gas inside the tube. Some tubes are of a reddish-brown color, and this is caused by a similar treatment, in which phosphorus is used in addition to the magnesium.

Mail Box Opens at Both Ends

Constructed along lines entirely different from those of the ordinary mail box, the homemade one shown in the illustration is of unusual convenience, as the mail is dropped in at the top and removed at the bottom, and it provides sufficient space for fairly large packages, magazines, rolled-up newspapers, and the like. It consists of a sheet-metal sheet, about 8 in. wide, 4 in. deep and 16 in. high, open at both ends. The edges of the metal are doubled over to prevent injury. The top and bottom, of iron-wood, are hinged to the wall on which the box is mounted and are held tightly against the openings by a heavy rubber band, cut from an old inner tube and attached to the inside of the top and bottom by means of hooks and screweyes.

As shown. In use, the postman lifts the top and drops in the mail, while the owner removes it by pressing down the bottom as indicated.
